This property is rich in original period detail, including intricate ceiling mouldings, decorative cornicing, ceiling roses, ornate window surrounds—all hallmark features of its era.

While the house retains much of its historical charm, it would benefit from a degree of modernisation, presenting a fantastic opportunity for those looking to restore or refurbish a classic Belfast home to their own specification. The kitchen to the rear opens out through double patio doors to a private enclosed yard, providing outdoor space for relaxing or entertaining.

Generously proportioned rooms across all three floors offer ample space for both investment or family living, with the existing HMO licence making it an attractive prospect for landlords seeking property in a popular, high-demand rental area. Located just off the Ormeau Road, the home enjoys easy access to cafes, shops, and public transport, in one of Belfast's most sought-after and character-rich neighbourhoods. Ormeau Park—one of the city's largest green spaces—is within minutes, offering walking trails, sports facilities and a weekly parkrun. Excellent transport links connect the area to Belfast city centre, Queen's University and the wider south Belfast corridor, making it ideal for both professionals and students.

With spacious accommodation over three floors, a current HMO licence, and unbeatable access to amenities, 64 South Parade offers immense potential—whether as a family home, shared rental property or stylish refurbishment project in one of Belfast's most sought-after neighbourhoods.
