Overview

I was right about this one. Perfectly balanced inside and out - on the edge of the 360 Acre Commons, and with a walled garden to add to its mature feel, despite the home being brand new. The façade resembles a sympathetic conversion in the style of a Linhay barn, adding even more character and blending beautifully within the mews, opposite the old Castle walls. It is beautiful. It is big. It is purposeful and has been designed to live in, not just to look pretty.

But then, with nearly 80 years of experience building homes locally, it is expected that this workforce-owned firm would produce nothing but quality. Especially as each tradesperson that worked on this traditional build owns a piece of Pearce Homes, it is their reputation at stake with every aspect of their work – and it shows. Many of the materials used in the construction are made in house at their own joinery. This is true also where the kitchen and bathroom fittings are sourced from the highest quality manufacturers like Bosch, Franke and Roca respectively. Essentially, they fit the items we would all choose – given the budget! Howdens makes the kitchens and are renowned locally for their quality and style.

There are many highlights and the split windows in the master bedroom are a stand-out feature. Another is the newel posts on the staircase (which are also made in the joinery) and it these details that separate these new homes, from others – in my opinion. The overall dimensions are impressive and at 142 m² (1,528 Sq Ft), is larger than many four-bedroom detached homes. The bedrooms are all large, the master features ensuite facilities and the study/family room, extra storage and the utility room completes the wish list as it enables my full lifestyle without needing to add to or amend. It is plenty, but not too much. The garden likewise is plentiful, but not so much that you spend all your time working in it. Balance.

There is no driveway. Although, there are two allocated and numbered parking spaces just in front and there is plenty of room for all the residents to pass if you are just dropping off directly outside the home. This is also the case for charging EV's. Each home has provision to install a charger at the front of the property to enable convenient home charging. An abundance of parking for friends and family can be found just behind the home in the Towns car park and there is room enough in the garden for a generous outbuilding to store bikes, gardening tools and summer garden furniture.

History surrounds Great Torrington from the great battle of 1646 which saw Lord Hopton (Royalist) and his forces defeated by Sir Thomas Fairfax, (marking the end of the resistance in the West Country), to the River Torridge below being home to Tarka the Otter and home to the second oldest Golf Course of its type in the country. Not to mention the RHS Gardens at Rosemoor (which can be seen from the communal gardens), the Tarka Trail – a 180-mile recreation highway that links us to the Coast where the nearest beaches are miles of soft sand, there is something of interest around every corner.
