

A deceptively spacious three bedroom end terrace house which also has the added benefit of a lower basement level which consists of two further separate rooms. Believed to have been constructed circa 1900's, the property is both bright and spacious but also in need of modernisation. Situated literally minutes away from the West Strand Beach, this property would present itself as a terrific opportunity for those looking to re-locate to this beautiful part of the North Antrim Coast. Truly a well laid out property in an amazing location, with an array of attributes on offer, it will only be upon internal appraisal that you will be able to appreciate what is for sale.

Approaching Portrush from Portstewart, as soon as you go through the Dhu Varren railway bridge, No. 40 will be the first property located on your left hand side.
